One man named Nick King has this blessing he has watched kingdoms fall and civilizations grow. He has moved from country to country amusing a new name every time. Right now he lives in Montreal Canada with the name Robert Wills and one morning when he expected nothing to change everything did.

"Haven't I seen you before?" A man in a starched black pin-striped suit lifted his hat at Nick and held out his hand. "John Cosco, from South Wales?"

Nick tried to look as shocked as possible. "You know me? South Wales? I have never been there in my life!" A lie, of course.

"Well I could've sworn I saw you only last month... You don't recognize me though - the businessman at R & R Co. in Sydney?" The man had been squeezing Nick's hand the entire time and staring him in the eyes.

"No, like I said, never been there." Nick assumed a serious face and pulled his hand away. "Now if you'll excuse me..." He nodded his head to the suited man and walked away.

Nick turned a corner down a busy street and looked behind him quickly. The man was following him.
